An action method can be a child or a normal action method, but child actions are action methods invoked from within a view, you cannot invoke a child action method via user request (URL). We can annotate an action method with the [ChildActionOnly] attribute to create a child action. Normally we use child action methods with partial views.

How to Create Child Action Method in ASP.NET MVC

ASP.NET MVC in Action is a comprehensive guide to MVC-based development using this powerful framework. It offers a clearly-written introduction both to the ASP.NET MVC Framework and to the MVC approach. The focus is on creating real, maintainable web applications—so don't expect toy examples and short snippets.
