One of the best tips for how to write a memoir that's powerful is to be honest and genuine. This is often tricky, because we don't want to hurt or upset the people (our family and friends!) we've written into our books. But it's important that you tell the truth — even if it makes your journey as an author more difficult.

~~#2: Define their narrative PURPOSE~~ No matter the role they play, every character in your story must serve a purpose. If you can remove a character from your manuscript without impacting readers' understanding of your plot or story world, then that particular character doesn't add value to your story. Give them purpose or let them go.

If you write and deliver a speech that doesn't go over well, you'll get feedback in real time. The people sitting in front of you could lose interest, start talking, doze off, or even wander out of the room. (Don't worry, only audiences in movies throw tomatoes). Of course, a poor speech is not the end of the world.
