Luther and the Jews. While The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod holds Martin Luther in high esteem for his bold proclamation and clear articulation of the teachings of Scripture, it deeply regrets and deplores statements made by Luther which express a negative and hostile attitude toward the Jews. In light of the many positive and caring statements concerning the Jews made by Luther throughout his lifetime, it would not be fair on the basis of these few regrettable (and uncharacteristic ...

Luther and the Jews - Lutheran Reformation

Luther ' s Dass Jesus Christus ein geborener jude sei (" That Jesus Christ Was Born A Jew, " 1523) is a manifesto calling on his listeners to treat Jews friendly, dissociate them from hated practices and thoughts (such as imposed usury and Foetor Judaicus [" Jewish stench "]), and instruct them properly in scriptures, since this will lead to the return of many Jews to ancestral patriarchs and prophets who are seen by Luther as Christian prototypes.

Was Luther anti-Semitic? | Christian History Magazine

Luther had seen how shamefully the Church had treated the Jews, and he had a plan to change that (2). He was sure that the reason that Jews did not convert to Christianity was that they couldn ' t stomach the corruption of the Church. Now the Jews would see that the Protestants were different and that they would be nice to the Jews.
