Sure, everybody had their own perspective on religion but Tagore decided to look at it in the humanity approach and how god can exist in our inner self. He clarified how the relationship of human being with environment, cosmic and those around him is one of God's greatest values. Tagore is no poet but reading this book made me wanna beg to differ.

Religion abstracts from man his powers, qualities, and essential determinations and deifies them as independent beings, no matter whether each one of them is singly turned into a being — as in polytheism — or all of them are turned into one being — as in monotheism.

Religion is, indeed, the self-consciousness and self-esteem of man who has either not yet won through to himself, or has already lost himself again. But man is no abstract being squatting outside the world. Man is the world of man — state, society. This state and this society produce religion, which is an inverted consciousness of the world ...

Nonetheless, human beings are naturally religious when by that we mean that they possess, by virtue of their given ontological being, a complex set of innate features, capacities, powers, limitations, and tendencies that give them the capacity to think, perceive, feel, imagine, desire, and act religiously and that under the right conditions tend to predispose and direct them toward religion. The natural religiousness of humanity is not discerned in the (nonexistent) uniformity of empirical ...

Religion is the substance, the ground, and the depth of man's spiritual life." When religion is seen in terms of sacred, divine, intensive valuing, or ultimate concern, then it is possible to understand why scientific findings and philosophical criticisms (e.g., those made by Richard Dawkins) do not necessarily disturb its adherents. The Religion Of Man Being The Hibbert Lectures

Religion today has taken a much-institutionalized form. Its origin has always been debated and discussed today by various scholars. In sociological terms, ' Religion is a system of sacred belief and practices both in the tangible and intangible form '. Religion can serve the dual role of ideology as well as institution.

The chapters included in this book, which comprises the Hibbert Lectures delivered in Oxford, at Manchester College, during the month of May 1930, contain also the gleanings of my thoughts on the same subject from the harvest of many lectures and addresses delivered in different countries of the world over a considerable period of my life.

The divine principle of unity has ever been that of an inner inter-relationship. This is revealed in some of its earliest stages in the evolution of multicellular life on this planet. The most perfect inward expression has been attained by man in his own body. But what is most important of all is the fact that man has also attained its realization in a jnore subtle body outside his physical system. He misses himself when isolated; he finds his own larger and truer self in his wide human relationship, His multicellular body is born and it dies; his multi-personal humanity is immortal. In this ideal of unity he realizes the eternal in his life and the boundless in his love. The unity becomes not a mere subjective idea, but an energizing truth. Whatever name may be given to it, and whatever form it symbolizes, the consciousness of this unity is spiritual, and our effort to be true to it is our religion. It ever waits to be revealed in our history in a more and more perfect illumination. We have our eyes, which relate to us the vision of the physical universe. We have also an inner faculty of our own which helps us to find our relationship with the supreme self of man, the universe of personality. This faculty is our luminous imagination, which in its higher stage is special to man. It offers us that vision of wholeness which for the biological necessity of physical survival is superfluous; its purpose is to arouse in us the sense of perfection which is our true sense of immortality. For perfection dwells ideally in Man the Eternal, inspiring love for this ideal in the individual, urging him more and more to realize it. This classic is organized as follows: I. Man ' s Universe II. The Creative Spirit III. The Surplus in Man IV. Spiritual Union V. The Prophet VI. The Vision VII. The Man of My Heart VIII. The Music Maker IX. The Artist X. Man ' s Nature XII. The Teacher XIII. Spiritual Freedom XIV. The Four Stages of Life XV. Conclusion

God gave us His Word to guide us on how we need to live our lives. The problem is, mankind also has free will, and with it comes an ego. In The Religion of Man vs. the Word of God: How Man Makes God Conform to Man's Image, author D. C. Darr has assembled a collection of topics exposing the arrogance of defining God in man's terms. We, as Christians, have become comfortable allowing our religious messengers, philosophers, and interpreters to form our opinion of who God is and what the Bible tells us. In this dangerous comfort zone, we do not question the opinion of our religious leaders, but instead accept it as fact. Discover with author D. C. Darr the serious offenses people have committed using manmade theologies. Find out how the doctrines of religion have led man to create 38,830 Christian denominations and dozens of Bible interpretations. This controversial expos é points out the consequences of blatantly defying God, intending to give readers a better understanding of, and relationship with, our Father in Heaven.

VATICAN II IS PROMETHEUS IN HIS ACT OF LARCENY."The Second Vatican Council is Prometheus in his act of larceny. It was a maneuver of all too human prudence carried out by a divinely constituted hierarchy, which burned for men the incense that belongs to God alone. As in the parable of the unfaithful steward, the Council cancelled man's debts to God, promising salvation to all; and in the worship of its New Mass gave man the better part. " While the fruits of Vatican II have been evident for decades many Catholics still lack the ability to articulate why the humanist principles that underlie Vatican II are so egregious. This book summarizes the main tenets of Vatican II, explains the correct theological and philosophical principles and exposes the fallacious thinking of the Council.
